“The French social sciences and the meaning of race”

I will discuss the reasons why French scholars have largely ignored “race” as an analytical category since the 1950s, and the consequences of this situation.

Pap Ndiaye is an Associate Professor of history at the Ecole des hautes études en sciences sociales in Paris (France). He has recently published “La Condition noire. Essai sur une minorité française” (Paris: Calmann-Lévy, 2008).
